This has become one of my favorite VR experiences. I expected a quirky, funny ride through some surreal VR spaces, and this game delivered that in spades. I did NOT expect it to present some big transhumanist/singularity-based ideas in an emotionally resonant way, but it delivered that too.. Pretty amusing. I would say definitely worth a buy.. Really great and unique vr experience, but I wish the game had more in it. I think it could have been competative for vr game of the year if there was more branching paths and endings in the game. There is only 2 endings, but 1 of those is just an ending where you lose , so that doesn't really count. It doesn't need as many as something like Stanley Parable but something like 5 endings would have been great.. At first, I was like "Aw, this is kind of neat. Little weird, but it's really funny. And the robot's cute. And it shows off virtual reality well. This is a fun game, I bet I could let my nieces play it." Then by the end of the game, I was like "AAA." 10/10, is essentially The Stanley Parable but focused on the nature of virtual reality/evolving tech rather than the nature of narrative and also gets more surreal and dark. And I really wish I could explain more in-depth why this game is good, but this is one of those games where if you explain too much beforehand it ruins the experience. EDIT 11/21/18 : I nominated this game for Steam's "Most Fun With a Machine" award, because Chaz is an amazing character. Seriously, surprised I didn't talk about him in the original review. He's brilliantly written and voice-acted, his design is simple but adorable and intimidating when he needs to be , and the algorithms and physics that keep him balanced are fun to mess around with. Chaz is, indeed, the most fun I had with a machine in a long time.. AN AMAZING GAME! This game is so funny while being kinda a dark phycological horror game where you rub and suck a stick of butter. Yeah I know, SCARY. I was expecting a jump scare half the time.
